The philosophy of The Greens upholds a vision of reality based on love of life, respect for nature, its life forms and natural processes, and awareness of the interdependent nature of the world.

All things are connected to the web of life. We recognise that we are part of nature - not above it - and our lifestyles and the continuation of life itself depends on our wise interaction with the biosphere. Our political and economic decisions must be made with this mind.

The policies of The Greens are guided by a long term view of the global future and are founded on the principles as expressed in our Charter.

*Drew Hutton,
co-founder of The Queensland
Greens and Australian Greens*

The Four Pillars

The Greens have four key principles.

Peace and nonviolence

We strive to achieve a culture of peace and cooperation between nation states, inside societies and between individuals, as the basis of global security. We believe that security should not depend on military strength but on cooperation, sound economics and social development, environmental safety and respect for human rights.

Social justice

The key to social justice is the equitable distribution of social and natural resources to ensure that all people have full opportunities for personal and social development. There can be no social justice without environmental justice, and vice versa.

Grassroots participatory democracy

We work towards a democracy in which all people are able to directly participate in the decisions that affect their lives, so that power and responsibility are concentrated in local and regional communities.

Ecological sustainability

We acknowledge that human beings are interdependent with the natural world and we respect all forms of life. We must preserve biodiversity and the integrity and resilience of life supporting ecosystems. We can learn a great deal from the way indigenous peoples of the world respect and nurture the land.

The Code of Ethics

Greens aspire to a code of ethics that guides our behaviours. We hope that new members will embrace these principles and enjoy the Green 'spirit'. We endeavour to be tolerant and respectful, avoiding demeaning behaviour towards any person or group. We value trustworthiness, sincerity and truth. We seek to provide a conciliatory and supportive work environment, and have group processes in place to encourage active participation, foster diversity and resolve conflict.
